REMARKS

On 2/3/2000, Internet web servers belonging to Fidelity Investments and Occidental Petroleum were the targets of denial of service attacks. The attacks were against the search function of the company's web sites. The attacks originated from a site owned by the FEDERATION OF RANDOM ACTION. The attacks coincided with physical world protests led by the RAINFOREST ACTION NETWORK.

Investigation is pending by Boston Division.

The U'wa of the Colombian cloud forest are in a life-and-death struggle to protect their traditional culture and sacred homeland from an oil project slated to begin on their land at anytime.

The U'wa are adamantly opposed to the drilling and warn that the project will lead to an increase in violence as seen in other oil regions of Colombia.

Despite this, Los Angeles-based Occidental Petroleum and the Colombian government continue to move forward with plans to drill. The U'wa have made a call for international support; now is the time for us to answer.

Eight Arrested for Shutting down Gore's New Hampshire Campaign HQ

Environmentalists Target VP for Ties to Oxy's Colombia Oil Project

* ACERCA * AMAZON WATCH *
* NATIVE FOREST NETWORK * RAINFOREST ACTION NETWORK *

For Immediate Release: January 26, 2000

Contacts: Lauren Sullivan: 415/305-RAIN
Steve Kretzmann: 510/551-7953

Manchester NH - Eight environmental and human rights activists were arrested around 1:00 p.m. today for staging a sit-in at the Gore campaign headquarters in Manchester. Supported by dozens of demonstrators outside, activists engaged in civil disobedience calling on Gore to use his deep family and financial ties to Occidental Petroleum to block the company's planned drilling on the U'wa tribal lands in the Colombian cloud forest.

The U'wa people, who are the legal owners of the land where Occidental plans to drill, are so opposed to the project that they have repeatedly stated their willingness to die defending their land from the oil project. Last week, a large number of Colombian troops were sent to secure this area so that Occidental can begin drilling. Yesterday, the Colombian Army forcibly evicted the U'wa from their land via helicopters. Three U'wa people are now reported missing. (U'wa Communique Jan 25 2000)

Vice President Gore's ties to Occidental Petroleum have come under intense public scrutiny in recent weeks. Articles in the Financial Times, Time Magazine, Salon Magazine, and The Wall Street Journal have all questioned Gore's deep connections to Oxy. Gore holds some $500,000 in stocks and, and stands to reap large financial rewards if Oxy finds the 1.5 billion barrels of oil that the company estimates is under U'wa land. Oxy and its employees are also frequent and generous contributors to both the Gore campaign and to the Democratic party.

"Gore can make the difference. He can save the U'wa and avert a public relations disaster for himself by intervening now," said Lauren Sullivan of the Rainforest Action Network.

The conflict in Colombia is intensifying for the peaceful U'wa tribe. According to a communiqué issued by the U'wa people and information from the Colombian military, since January 19, at least 500 --and as many as several thousand-- Colombian soldiers have been occupying an area of the traditional territory to which the U'wa have recently gained legal title. Yesterday, soldiers forcibly removed dozens of U'wa men, women, children, and elders who had been occupying the site since mid-November.

"We prefer genocide at the hands of the Colombian government over relinquishing our Mother Earth to the oil companies," states the U'wa communiqué. U'wa leaders have vowed to continue to nonviolently fight Oxy's efforts to drill on their land.

In recent weeks, Gore campaign offices have been flooded by calls of concern about Gore's connection to Occidental and the planned drilling on U'wa lands. Dozens of human rights and environmental organizations have sent letters to Gore, including the Sierra Club. Additional protests are planned at future Gore campaign stops in the coming days.

Fidelity Mutual Funds Hit by Protests in 20 Cities Over Investment in Colombian Oil Project

In Campaign Launch Against Investment Giant, Supporters of U'wa Indians Demand Fidelity Divest from Occidental Petroleum Corporation if Drilling not Halted

U'wa Were Removed Militarily After Occupation of Proposed Drilling Site on January 25, 2000

B-ROLL OF U'WA INDIANS AND OIL DRILLING AVAILABLE, SATELLITE UPLINK: Thurs, Feb 3, 13:00 - 13:30, 17:00 - 17:30 EST, Galaxy 6, Transponder 22, Vertical 4140

Fidelity Investments was hit today by demonstrators at 20 of its offices across the country in a protest against the mutual fund giant's stake in Occidental Petroleum, which is set to drill on the lands of U'wa Indians in Colombia. Fresh on the heels of its victory against Home Depot, Rainforest Action Network (RAN), Amazon Watch and a coalition of environmental and human rights organizations are asking Fidelity to pressure Occidental to cancel the drilling project. If Fidelity refuses, RAN and Amazon Watch will begin a campaign asking investors to withdraw their savings and investments from Fidelity.

Protests will take place in Atlanta, Boston, New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles and other cities nationally and internationally.

RAN and Amazon Watch targeted Boston-based Fidelity Investments because it controls more than 30 million shares of Occidental. This represents approximately $700 million - enough, RAN and Amazon Watch believe, to make Occidental listen.

"Cash from Fidelity will be used to drill on U'wa land against the tribe's will and pollute tropical forests," said Lauren Sullivan of Rainforest Action Network. "As an owner of Occidental, Fidelity Investments can follow its pledge to 'invest responsibly' and prevent the drilling."

The Colombian military began evicting the U'wa from their legalized, traditional lands for Occidental's Samore project in northeastern Colombia on January 25 in order to begin a major oil drilling operation. The U'wa consider the area, which includes intact Andean cloud forest and overlaps with the reserve, to be sacred ancestral territory. They recently purchased the land and are disputing the government's approval of a license for Occidental to drill there.

"The region under contention has great significance as a U'wa sacred site," said Berito KuwarU'wa, spokesperson for the U'wa people, "The protection of this area adjacent to our reserve is fundamentally important to our way of life." --more--

In 1995 the U'wa leaders grabbed international attention when they threatened to commit collective suicide if the project was not stopped. In recent weeks the U'wa have repeatedly stated that they are willing to die to stop the project.

Vice President Al Gore, who is a significant Occidental shareholder, has been shadowed during his campaign in New Hampshire by protesters urging him to put pressure on Occidental. Gore's Occidental stock holdings are valued at least $500,000, an amount that could grow considerably if Occidental expands its operations in the U'wa's land.

"We are alarmed and concerned by the military operation underway on U'wa land, said Stephen Kretzmann of Amazon Watch. "We urge Occidental's two most important shareholders, Al Gore and Fidelity Investments, to act immediately to protect the U'wa."

Millions of acres of rainforest each year are destroyed by the road building, colonization and pollution that come with oil and mining operations.

Oil is Colombia's largest export and has become a target in the civil war. In December, leftist guerrillas killed three policemen and ten civilians in the town of Cubara where the U'wa Traditional Authority's office is located. The Cano Limon pipeline owned by Occidental has been damaged over 600 times in the 13 years since it was built, according to Occidental's own records. These attacks have released over 1.7 million barrels of crude oil into waterways and soil just north of U'wa territory. In contrast, the U'wa's eight year struggle against the drilling has remained a peaceful one.

"With oil operations comes destruction," said KuwarU'wa. "Each area of the forest that has been developed for oil has paved the way for civil war battles, causing great violence against people and our Mother Earth."

Military units have been deployed by the government to protect oil facilities. According to the U'wa, the militarization has led to an increase in human rights abuses and the killing of unarmed civilians. The U'wa believe that development of the proposed site would compromise the tribe and the environment because it would increase oil-related violence between armed groups in the politically unstable region.

"The truth here in Colombia is that the military is being used to suppress peaceful Indians and protect US oil companies," stated KuwarU'wa.

Action Alert 147: December 1999

Occidental Set to Drill on U'wa Land

US-based Occidental Petroleum is moving forward with a massive oil project on the traditional territory of the U'wa, a five thousand member indigenous community in Northeastern Colombia. The U'wa are adamantly opposed to the Samoré Block project, as it is known in the oil industry, believing that it will bring violence and environmental devastation to their homeland.

The U'wa grabbed international headlines in 1996 when they vowed to commit collective suicide if the Samoré Block project is not halted. Their message is clear: In the words of the U'wa, "We would rather die, protecting everything that we hold sacred, than lose everything that makes us U'wa."

The U'wa are adamantly opposed to an oil project on their territory.

So far, Occidental has failed to hear the U'wa's message. Despite overwhelming local and international support for the U'wa, the project is closer than ever to becoming a reality. One of the final legal hurdles to the project was removed in September when Colombia's Minister of the Environment granted Occidental a permit to begin exploratory drilling on U'wa territory.

In November, hundreds of U'wa Indians marched on the site of Occidental's first planned drill site, establishing a permanent settlement to block the drilling slated to begin in the coming weeks. The drill site is located less than six hundred yards from the legally-recognized U'wa Unified Reserve and clearly falls within the U'wa's larger traditional ancestral territory. The U'wa community of Santa Marta inhabits the area adjacent to the well site, putting them at clear risk from the impacts of the oil project.

Occidental's Caño Limon pipeline in Arauca, Colombia, just north of the U'wa's territory, has become a national symbol of the link between oil, violence, and environmental devastation in Colombia. Once peaceful and sparsely-populated, Arauca has been torn apart by violence since the construction of the pipeline. The pipeline itself has been bombed nearly six hundred times and has spilled CONNECT THE U'WA WITH YOUR WORK AGAINST THE WORLD TRADE ORGANIZATION OR OTHER FORMS OF CORPORATE DOMINATION. The next three months will be the critical time for the U'wa. As many activists around the world are organize around the next World Trade Organization meeting (Nov 29-Dec 3) the U'wa will be fighting for their lives against the same system of unchecked corporate expansion. Use the U'wa resistance as an example of the emerging global resistance to corporate domination. Connect the U'wa struggle with your ongoing campaigns - whether its environmental justice, anti-militarism, indigenous rights or fighting globalization. Use the U'wa struggle as an example on the November 30th day of action against globalization. See <http://go.to/n30> or email N30contacts@angelfire.com for details.

Fact sheets and other campaign materials are available on the RAN website WWW.RAN.ORG site Gibraltar 1 is situated. Faced with opposition presented by the U'wa people, headed by our representative and indigenous leader Roberto Cobarria, military forces declared that "the oil will be extracted even over and above the U'wa people." Also police forces were dispatched to the zone for the security of Occidental's engineers.

Since the 15th of November 1999, more than 250 U'wa people have occupied Cedeno, part of our ancestral territory, resisting the exploitation brought on by Oxy. Now we are being surrounded by the 5000 military agents and Colombian police who have put at risk our physical integrity.

With this deed, Occidental and the Colombian government are insisting on ignoring our territorial rights over land we have occupied for thousands of years. We are the owners of the territory on which they aim to exploit petroleum, without recognizing the constitutional rights of community lands for our ethnic group which are inalienable, non-negotiable, and irremovable, protected by public laws over collective property.

In this way, the Colombian government headed by the Minister of Mining and Energy with the compliance of INCORA, in a shadowy process is seeking to declare U'wa territory a special petroleum reserve zone with the false argument that the national petroleum industry is covered by the law as a public utility or social interest, with the sole purpose of permitting and facilitating petroleum exploitation by the multinational corporation Occidental. We are making an urgent call to the national and international community, and to all groups who have supported us, to mobilize against this last attempt to trample upon the U'wa nation, which threatens our existence and culture. WE U'WA WILL NOT CEDE OUR CULTURAL, HISTORIC AND

ANCIENT

RIGHTS. WE PREFER GENOCIDE SPONSORED BY THE COLOMBIAN GOVERNMENT RATHER THAN HANDING OVER OUR MOTHER EARTH TO OIL COMPANIES

Please let Patrick at Rainforest Action Network know if you are organizing something.

Rainforest Action Network can provide hard copies of materials (they can also be downloaded from our website at www.ran.org) and copies of a 10 minute video in North American format on the murder of U'wa activist Terry Freitas. Additional information can be found at www.amazonwatch.org and www.moles.org.

NOTE ON COMMUNICATIONS WITH THE U'WA Communications with the U'wa have been difficult as the one phone line to the U'wa office in Cubara has been repeatedly cut off. Fortunately the U'wa Defense Working Group has raised the funds for a satellite phone that will provide a direct link to the occupation site. Unfortunately satellite phones are enormously expensive with calls running up to $5 a minute. Funds will be desperately needed to pay the bill. If you would like to contribute send donations (marked "U'wa phone") to Amazon Watch 200110 Rockport Way Malibu CA 90265 USA.

SAMPLE LETTER

Dear Mr. Johnson III

I recently learned that Occidental Petroleum is moving forward with the Samore Block oil project on the traditional territory of the U'wa People of Colombia. As you probably know, the U'wa are adamantly opposed to Occidental's drilling plans and are willing to die to stop this project.

Fidelity is one of the largest shareholders of Occidental stock, and as such has unrivaled power to influence Occidental's decisions. I urge you to do everything in your power to stop this human and ecological tragedy before it takes place.

If the Samore Block project goes forward, it will jeopardize the lives of five thousand people and the health of a fragile forest ecosystem.

The project will also have repercussions that extend far beyond Colombia, as the U'wa have overwhelming international support.

As one of Occidental's primary shareholders, Fidelity has a responsibility to take a stand on this highly controversial and potentially deadly project. Please let me know what steps you plan to take to resolve this issue.

Sincerely, Your Name ALSO CONTACT Occidental and the Colombian government directly. #3 Association of

U'wa Traditional Authorities November 17, 1999 Cubara, Colombia

COMMUNIQUE TO THE INTERNATIONAL PUBLIC Approximately 200 members of the U'wa indigenous tribe of northeastern Colombia assembled in a permanent settlement on part of our ancestral lands yesterday.

November 16. This area, which has been colonized by farmers, is the site where the multinational company Occidental Petroleum (Oxy) wants to drill the oil well "Gibraltar 1" an action which threatens life and our ancient culture.

With this permanent presence and with the support of the local farmers of Sarare, we are claiming our ancestral and constitutional rights to life and to our traditional territory. We demand that the Colombian government and Oxy leave us in peace and that once and for all they cancel the oil project in this area. We U'wa people are willing to give our lives to defend Mother Earth from this project which will annihilate our culture, destroy nature, and upset the world's equilibrium. Caring for the Earth and the welfare of our children and of future generations is not only the responsibility of the U'wa people but of the entire national and international.

close to two million barrels of oil into nearby rivers, lakes, and soil.

Oil-related violence has already begun to spread to the heart of the U'wa community. In 1997, an U'wa leader was assaulted by hooded men who threatened to kill him if he didn't sign an "authorization form." In March, three American activists were murdered while in Colombia working with the U'wa. The U'wa fear that the assault and murders are a harbinger of things to come if an oil project goes forward on their land.

The U'wa's campaign to halt the project has been steadily gaining momentum. Last year, Occidental's original partner in the Samoré Block, Royal Dutch/Shell, pulled out of the project citing human rights and public relations concerns. And at Occidental's Annual General Meeting this year, shareholders representing over forty million shares and eight hundred million dollars worth of stock voted in favor of a resolution asking Occidental to re-evaluate the project.

Although Occidental is poised to begin its destructive project on the U'wa's sacred homeland, the U'wa are standing firm and support for their position has never been stronger. In the words of the U'wa, "We are all children of the Earth. Help us to defend her."

What You Can Do!

Fidelity Investments is one of the single largest shareholders of Occidental Petroleum stock. As a major owner of Occidental, Fidelity has the power to influence Occidental's business decisions. Please write to Fidelity's Chairman and urge him to use Fidelity's power and influence to bring an end to the oil project on U'wa territory. Write to Edward Johnson III, Chairman of Fidelity Investments. If you have investments through Fidelity and would like to get more involved, please contact our Beyond Oil Campaign Director at (415) 398-4404.

Edward Johnson, III

Chairman, Fidelity Investments

82 Devonshire St.

Boston, Ma 02109

Dear Mr. Johnson;

I write to you on a matter of the deepest concern for you as Chairman of Fidelity and for all of us, who are investors with you, as ethical human beings. My family and I are long time investors with you, with multiple accounts. We are collectively extremely dismayed to learn of the recent events at the Goliath 1 site of the Samore Block Project that Occidental Petroleum has begun in Columbia. No doubt you remember that Fidelity holds a high percentage of Occidental's stock and that the project I refer to has been in the world news because the Uwa Indian tribe, whose ancestral lands the project invades, have announced they will commit mass suicide if the project proceeds. On Wednesday January 26, apparently at the behest of Occidental Petroleum, officers broke up the Uwa's long standing peaceful sit-in at the site. Three Uwa leaders have disappeared and must be presumed tortured and/or executed. Given the violence already committed and the very real possibility of the death of every man, woman, and child of the Uwa nation I ask you in the strongest possible terms to take any and every action you can to stop Occidental from proceeding on this misguided course. There are human considerations which are simply more important than profit.

This turn of events gives Fidelity a chance to assert leadership in an area highlighted by the recent events at the Seattle World Trade conference, that is to show that global business can and will exercise reasonable restraint to protect the well-being of native peoples and ecosystems before those restraints are imposed from the outside by force. It also allows Fidelity the opportunity to stand on the positive side of the next round of international publicity about the drilling site, publicity which is about to become considerable. Finally, compassionate action on Fidelity's part will allow it to keep the investments of many who, like us, are simply no longer willing to sit quietly while international business acts as though the well being of non-investors is simply beneath consideration.

Thank you for your concern. I look forward to your actions in response. If you would also like to contact me about this issue I would welcome that.

Sincerely,

Bruce W. Scotton

Campaign Updates

U'wa Campaign

November 18, 1999

Greetings friends and supporters of the U'wa,

I need say little to add to the most recent U'wa communiqué since their words are far more powerful than mine. They have called for supporters to join them in their occupation of the drill site as well as to take action around the world to draw attention to this situation. As Occidental Petroleum, backed up by the Colombian military prepares to move into the drill site all of us around the world must stand in solidarity with them.

Please take your solidarity to the streets. Organize a vigil, demonstration or direct action at the nearest Colombian consulate/embassy. Highlight America's role in financing the Colombian military. Reprint and circulate the communiqué below. Make your local press cover this issue by writing letters, articles and organizing solidarity actions. Harrass Al Gore when he makes campaign apperances about why he is accepting campaign contributions from Occidental. Get local associations, groups, unions or faith groups to pass a resolution in support of the U'wa. Incorporate the U'wa issue into your demonstrations against the WTO and corporate globalization on Nov 30 they are an incredible example of resistance from the frontlines of the global economy!

Rainforest Action Network can provide hard copies of materials. (See the U'wa Campaign section of the site.)

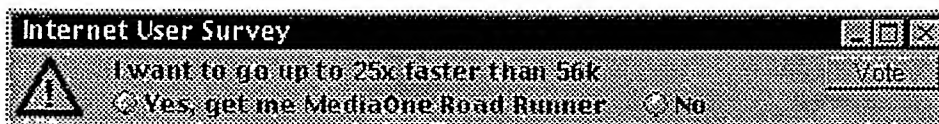

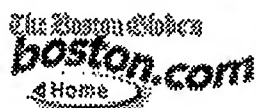

We are completing research on Occidental's shareholders and expect to have some additional financial targets that we can all put pressure on very soon. One of the biggest investors in Occidental is Fidelity Investments. They have outlets in financial districts in many major cities in the U.S, Canada, Europe and Japan (usually ground floor, plenty of windows, high traffic locations). Take a look around your local financial district and see if you can find them. We will keep you posted on what we discover and potential actions we could demand Fidelity take on behalf of the U'wa. Let us know what you are planning in your area.

In the spirit of the U'wa resistance,

Fidelity a target in oil protest

By Karen Hsu, Globe Correspondent, 2/4/2000

Environmental and human rights groups yesterday demonstrated outside Fidelity Investments offices in Boston and 19 other cities to protest the mutual fund company's stake in Occidental Petroleum Corp., which plans to drill for oil on land claimed by the U'wa Indians in Colombia.

The groups want Boston-based Fidelity to pressure Occidental to cancel the drillings and they have threatened to start a campaign to encourage customers to withdraw their money from the giant investment firm.

In Boston yesterday, about 50 people rallied in the bitter cold as customers tried to enter Fidelity's Congress Street offices. At one point, the bomb squad was called after someone tried to handcuff a briefcase with a tape recorder playing to one of the lobby doors.

Other protests at Fidelity offices took place in Atlanta, New York, Chicago, San Francisco, and Los Angeles. Fidelity controls about 30 million, or about 8.5 percent, of Occidental's shares, the human rights and environmental groups said.

In Prague, Geneva, and Tel Aviv, the protest groups demonstrated in front of Colombian embassies.

The U'wa dispute the government's approval of a license for Occidental to drill for oil, Colombia's largest export, and have tried to block the drilling equipment.

Last week, the Colombian military began evicting a few members of the U'wa, a tribe of 5,000 Colombian Indians, from their property to a military base as machinery tried to move in.

The drill site is in an area of disputed land. Roberto Perez, the highest elected official of the U'was, says the site is about 1,600 feet from the tribe's reservation, but the Colombian government contends it is several miles away. Nonetheless, the area is considered part of the tribe's ancestral lands, Perez said in a telephone interview from Bogota, the capital. Perez said the tribe last year bought two farms on land that has become part of the drilling area.

The U'wa have threatened to walk off a 1,400-foot cliff in the Andes in a mass suicide to protect the land they considered sacred. Their ritual chants reminisce a time, hundreds of years ago, when many U'wa jumped off a cliff to avoid enslavement by Spanish invaders.

"It is not only ecocide, but cultural genocide," said Dune Lankard, a protester in Boston who came from Alaska. Lankard, 40, is a commercial fisherman who fought for compensation when the Exxon Valdez oil spill ruined his Eyak people's lands.

The protest was organized by Rainforest Action Network, Amazon Watch, and other organizations. Rainforest Action Network was effective last year in persuading Home Depot, the nation's largest retailer of lumber, to agree not to sell any wood from endangered forests.

A Fidelity spokesman yesterday said the resolution of such disputes should be in the hands of the government. "The appropriate authorities of the world have the responsibility to address matters of this type. We would hope they would do so fairly and wisely on behalf of their citizens," said Vincent Loporchio, spokesman for Fidelity. "Our responsibility is to weigh the impact of these issues on behalf of our mutual fund shareholders." Occidental did not return phone calls.

The activists have also targeted Vice President Al Gore, whose Occidental stock holdings are valued up to $500,000. Those shares came from his father when he sat on Occidental's board.

Simon Billenness, senior analyst at Trillium Asset Management in Boston, a socially responsible investment firm with $600 million in client assets, said that both Fidelity and Gore could influence the petroleum company.

"Both of them could easily pick up the phone and talk to the CEO of Occidental, which could send a very strong message that this project on U'wa lands is going to be counterproductive in the long term for Occidental," Billenness said.

BEYOND OIL CAMPAIGN

U'wa Campaign

The U'wa of the Colombian cloud forest are in a life-and-death struggle to protect their traditional culture and sacred homeland from an oil project slated to begin on their land at anytime. The U'wa are adamantly opposed to the drilling and warn that the project will lead to an increase in violence as seen in other oil regions of Colombia. Despite this, Los Angeles-based Occidental Petroleum and the Colombian government continue forward with plans to drill.

Indeed on January 25 of this year, the U'wa were evicted from their lands surrounding the drillsite by the Colombian military in coordination with Occidental Petroleum. RAN is focusing its efforts on two targets: Fidelity Investments, one of Oxy's largest shareholders, and Vice President Al Gore, also an Oxy shareholder with strong family ties to Occidental Petroleum. The U'wa have made a call for international support; now is the time for us to answer. Find out more about the U'wa people...

About the Campaign

What You Can Do
Regional Campaigns

The Beyond Oil Campaign works to move society out of our devastating dependence on fossil fuels and into renewable energy options as a necessary step in saving the world's last rainforests. The expanse of oil and gas projects in rainforest areas opens up million of new acres each year to roads, colonization and pollution. What is more, rapid climate change, primarily from the excessive burning of fossil fuels, spells doom for forests as they cannot adapt to the weather changes and subsequently burn, deteriorate with changes in animal populations, or decay from excessive moisture. Through shutting down rainforest oil projects and galvanizing public concern over climate change's threat to forests, the Beyond Oil Campaign offers the public, policy makers and industry a clear path towards a sustainable energy future.

Currently, the Beyond Oil Campaign is focusing primarily on Occidental Petroleum's project on the ancestral land of the U'wa people, an indigenous people of 5,000 in the cloudforests of eastern Colombia.

How Can I Help Save the Rainforest?

Become a Rainforest Action Group!

What is a Rainforest Action Group?

Rainforest Action Groups (RAGs) are the basic building block of the grassroots rainforest protection movement. RAGs are groups of concerned community members who organize together to protect the world's remaining rainforests. This may involve organizing educational events, participating in international campaigns or working to move local institutions towards sustainability. There are many different types of RAGs: some groups work exclusively on rainforest issues while other groups work on many different issues as well as rainforest destruction. Some are based on campuses and others in communities. Some RAGs are parts of other networks while others are affiliated only with RAN. Likewise, different RAGs use different tactics; there is room for everyone in the network whether they focus on fundraising or civil disobedience. Our diversity is one of our greatest strengths.

What Do RAGS Do?

Each RAG is different and works on the issues that most concern them using the strategies and tactics that they feel most comfortable with. In general, much of the work focuses on corporate accountability and pressuring companies to act in an ecologically and morally responsible manner. Current RAG campaigns are taking on not only the timber and fossil fuel industries but also home improvement, furniture, and even clothing chains. While challenging the destroyers first hand, RAGs also work to reduce the demand for unsustainable rainforest products and educate the public about alternatives. Another important piece of our work is to support the rights of indigenous communities by assisting them in their efforts to stop fossil fuel exploration, logging and other development projects that threaten their ancestral homelands.

Why Would I Want My Group to be a RAG?

In our efforts to promote justice and ecological sanity we are all up against powerful corporate interests who have immense power and resources and are highly organized into global networks. In order to challenge their destructive power we need to match their organizing and build parallel networks that can magnify our power through collective strategizing and coordinated action. The RAG network is one way to start the process of linking up more and more environmental and social justice groups into a common front to challenge environmental destruction and injustice.

Listing your existing group as a RAG taps you into the diverse network of groups working on the issues of protecting biological and cultural diversity in forest ecosystems around the world. The network allows local organizers to connect with activists all across the world and share information about related work happening in other communities. Network groups also receive RAN action alerts, World Rainforest Reports and other relevant information.

Network Resources

Communication between RAGs is facilitated by the rags-rap list serve which allows local groups to both send and receive email updates about rainforest protection campaigns. RAGs can also publicize their work through RAN's website. RAGs can apply for small grants to help fund their organizing for specific projects. Also the Grassroots Coordinator and other RAN campaign staff are available as resources to help with local organizing, group development, skills training, strategic planning and general support. Our movement needs every involved group to be active, effective and growing!

IMPAIRMENT - DENIAL OF SERVICE
2/3/2000

Synopsis: Leads set for Los Angeles and Minneapolis Divisions in captioned matter.

Enclosures: Enclosed for Minneapolis Division are two copies of a Federal Grand Jury Subpoena and one preservation of evidence letter.

Details: On 2/3/2000, an Internet denial of service attack was directed at Fidelity Investments and Occidental Petroleum's Internet web servers. The attack was in response to Occidental and Fidelity's oil drilling and financing efforts in Colombia, and its effect on the native U'wa people living in Colombia. Fidelity's United Kingdom based Web and financial trading servers were disrupted as a result of the attack.

The Internet activity against captioned victims was timed to coincide with physical-world protests on 2/3/2000. Specifically, approximately 96 members supporting the RAINFOREST ACTION NETWORK protested at Fidelity's Boston, MA Investor Center on 2/3/2000.

The FEDERATION OF RANDOM ACTION designed an Internet web site, accessible to the public, which generated the denial of service attack. The site was hosted at several locations including: [REDACTED]

On 2/3/00, Internet web servers belonging to Fidelity Investments and Occidental Petroleum were the targets of denial of service attacks. The attacks were against the search function of the company's web sites. The attacks originated from a site owned by the Federation of Random Action. The attacks coincided with physical world protests led by the Rainforest Action Network.

The attack was in response to Occidental and Fidelity's oil drilling and financing efforts in Colombia, and its effect on the native U'wa people living in Colombia. Fidelity's United Kingdom based Web and financial trading servers were disrupted as a result of the attack.

The Internet activity against captioned victims was timed to coincide with physical-world protests on 2/3/2000. Specifically, approximately 96 members supporting the RAINFOREST ACTION NETWORK protested at Fidelity's Boston, MA Investor Center
